Editors note: The issue on Women of Lycoming brought more response than any other single edition of the alumni magazine. The following are excerpts from some of the letters:

. . . . .

Dear Editor,

I loved your latest issue, especially the article on the past Homecoming and May Queens. . .

Although it was fun to see what we all had been doing all these years, your article has a mistake. You forgot one of the Homecoming queens. I was Homecoming Queen in 1959 and May Queen in 1962. The Homecoming Queen for 1961 was Leonora Jones from York, PA. Even then it was sometimes confusing — Laurie Jones and Norrie Jones.

I am so proud to say that I graduated from Lycoming College. And I am always impressed with how much the college has grown.

On their last free Saturday, before they were to start classes, more than 391 Lycoming freshmen spent the day picking up litter along Pine Creek, visiting nursing homes, cooking at St. Anthony's soup kitchen or serving in any one of the other 22 volunteer opportunities.

"Learning through service" is not merely a catchy slogan for Freshman Seminar. It represents a growing philosophy on campus.

"Since the close of the 'Me Decade' of the 1980s, colleges like Lycoming are seeing a lot more interest in volunteer service," says Rev. Marco Hunsberger, the campus minister whose office also serves as the clearinghouse for volunteer programs.

In anancy Flory Spannuth '64 spends the morning cataloging and ordering books for St. Paul's United Methodist Church. Ronalee Bennett Trogner '69 compiles an invitation list for yet another fund-raiser. And Carolyn-Kay Lundy '63 runs a board meeting for the Williamsport Symphony Orchestra.

All three graduated at a time when most women did not work outside the home. While their families came first, they chose to make a career out of being volunteers.

In fact, Carolyn-Kay Lundy, who gives her employment as a "professional volunteer," recently completed her master's degree in Public Administration at Marywood College, a degree she pursued—not for advancement in a career path job—but to help her in her volunteer work.

"I was the only one in the master's program who didn't have a job," she remarks.

Currently she serves as president of the Williamsport Symphony Board and a director of the Williamsport Home and the American Red Cross. But she also has been on the Board of the YWCA, the Girl Scouts, the Crippled Children's Society, and Friends of the Library. In addition, she served as a

As a volunteer, Carolyn-Kay has had the opportunity to take risks and grow as an individual.

Division Chairman for the Community Arts Center fund-raising campaign. Organizations now seek out Carolyn-Kay because she has Board experience.

Her career in volunteerism began the day after her honeymoon when she was asked to help with the United Way appeal. Over 25 years ago, a friend asked her to help with arts and crafts at the Williamsport Home, a private, non-profit nursing home. In a short time, Carolyn-Kay had found an outlet for her enormous energy as a director on the Board.

It was an exciting venture for her. "We were all woman volunteers and we were a real working board, making investment decisions, major purchases and building decisions," she recalls. In due course, the ladies sold the old residence, purchased land, took out a mortgage, and built a modern nursing home and apartment complex. "We were even involved with labor negotiations with the National Labor Relations Board," Carolyn-Kay remembers.

As a volunteer, Carolyn-Kay has had the opportunity to take risks and grow as an individual. She has also been able to pick her projects and to schedule her own time, time that now allows her to be an active grandmother.

"You have to like working with people and you have to care about what you are doing," she says about volunteerism. She makes it a point, for example, to volunteer for "Daffodil Days" for the American Cancer Society as a way of working for friends who have cancer. But there are large rewards.

"I love serious music," says Carolyn-Kay, "and I get the greatest feeling of satisfaction after a good concert [by the Williamsport Symphony], knowing that I helped make it happen."

There's a feeling of obligation that motivates Roni Trogner's volunteer work. "You owe it to your community to try to keep things going and to make your community a better place," she explains.

When Roni Bennett graduated from Lycoming in 1969, she already had her future planned: marriage to John Trogner '68 and a family. Her volunteer interests grew out of her children's interests. First she became a class parent. Then she became involved as a team mother for baseball and soccer, and finally part of the administration for ski-racing at nearby Mountaintop Resort.

Her friends also persuaded her to join the Junior League. Soon she was fund-raising for the Tri-County Association for the Blind; then the Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra. She began to find herself organizing more and more special events, an activity that now consumes a considerable portion of her time. "I'm very good at putting together an invitation list," she concedes.

Nancy Spannuth '64 began her volunteer work as a way of finding a niche in a new town.

She joined the Junior Woman's Club shortly after moving to State College (Pa.) in 1973. The members, like herself, were mostly young mothers.

Through the years she graduated into the Woman's Club, holding several local and state positions in the organization. The Club put on children's plays, created a Santa's Workshop for Christmas and ran Las Vegas Nights to raise money for worthy community projects.

Two years ago, her children now out of college, she began working as a media specialist in the high school library. But she hasn't given up her volunteer projects.

"There are people who need important services," Nancy says to explain why she spent a lot of summer hours cataloging and ordering books for the church library. The church library is just the latest project in her continuing involvement with St. Paul's United Methodist Church in State College. First a Sunday School teacher, then Sunday School coordinator, she was also on a committee for the rebuilding of the church after it burnt to the ground in 1987.

It helps that her husband, Fred Spannuth '61, is also active in St. Paul's. For years, Fred has been in charge of the church kitchen where he creates his legendary chicken and waffle suppers.

Both Nancy and Roni Trogner can see an evolution in volunteers. "Twenty years ago, a lot of women had a lot of time to give," Roni observes.

There are days, between endless carpools and teen activities, when she feels that she is picking up the slack for the parents who work.

The nature of volunteer work has changed from blue to white collar activities. "Volunteers used to get their hands dirty," Roni notes. They might pack Thanksgiving baskets, or organize book sales. Now volunteers are more involved in marketing and fund-raising," she comments.

Roni feels that the adult volunteers—many of whom have full time jobs and limited time—bring a new dimension to volunteerism.

"They know how to network," Roni says with admiration. "They have good contacts and they know how to get funding for a project."

She also sees volunteerism reaching out to teenagers. Her son's middle school has been involved in making sleeping bags for the homeless in his home economics class. Another program "volunteers" tries to get students in the Cumberland Valley interested in volunteer programs.

Something has happened to Nancy Spannuth's Woman's Club. As the years have gone by, the average age of the women in the Club has steadily increased. "There are very few members under the age of 50," she says. But the Club, entering its 100th year, is far from dying. A new phenomenon has occurred: more retired women have joined the organization. What once had been a career choice for many women who wanted to accommodate family priorities, now appears to have become a second career choice for the brief-case-toting set.

The face of volunteerism may change, but the sense of community responsibility appears to be passed from one generation to the next.

"I don't really see a decline in volunteerism," says Carolyn-Kay. "There are always those people who will give their time and energy to the things that really matter to them." ▲

Nancy Spannuth reaches out through the church.

FOR LYCOMING

One Plus One Makes all the Difference

If you don't think one alumnus can make a difference in Lycoming's success, talk to Jim Spencer, dean of admission; or Chris Eck MacGill '77, director of the career development center; or Frank Girardi, director of athletics; or Kathy Zechman GaNung '83, director of alumni programs.

"This is a very personal college," explained Jim Spencer. "We know that the reason a student chooses Lycoming can be as simple as a talk with a graduate or a good experience at one of our receptions."

There are over 200 alumni who helped directly with recruiting last year. (See our Thank You list on pages 9 and 10.)

Kim and Craig Heal

Recruiting for Lycoming

Kim and Craig Heal ('88 & '87) are just two of the volunteers who are helping Lycoming recruit new students. Two or three times a year, the Heals of Long Valley, N.J., spend an evening at one of the local high school "college nights," representing the college where they met. Last year, they also served as hosts at a Lycoming open house reception held at the local Sheraton Hotel.

"We both had a great experience at Lycoming," Craig explained. "And we like to tell people about it. It's rewarding when at the end of a reception, parents will pull you aside and tell you how much they appreciate the kind of open house Lycoming has."

"Parents and students are apprehensive and it helps when they can talk to alumni who have been through it," Craig continued. "The Lycoming receptions are very creative. There's no pressure on students."

Both Craig and Kim were very active at Lycoming. He in Theta Chi fraternity and as president of SALC; she as president of Beta Phi sorority, captain of the field hockey team, and as vice president of SALC.

Kim became involved in admissions recruiting when she interned in the Lycoming College Admissions Office her senior year. It became natural to continue to represent the college after graduation.

Kim understands the value of young alums participating in admissions recruitment. "Young alumni are the best salespeople for the College because it is easy for them to relate to students' concerns," she said.

Both Heals have turned their degrees into promising careers. Craig, a business administration major, is a vice president at Mid-Atlantic Bank. Kim, a mass communication major, is a district sales manager for Thermador. They are now parents of a young Lycoming recruit, Chad Heal, born March 29, 1994.

Career Networking

Jeff Spangler '94 wanted to pursue a career in film production, so when Tom Woodruff Jr. '80 came back for Homecoming last year, Spangler made it a point to attend the post game reception where he was able to meet and talk to the Oscar-winning special effects artist.

Woodruff and dozens of other alumni play a critical role in Lycoming's career development program. "In a very competitive marketplace, we can give our students something that no other college graduates will have — that is our network of Lycoming alumni," said Chris MacGill, Director of Career Development.

Chris referred to her database of 11,000 alumni as the LAND program, which stands for the Lycoming Alumni Network Development. "If you want to land a job," she told her students, "use LAND." Chris encouraged them to call alumni for advice on careers, the job hunt, or on a specific company. Lycoming has alumni in half of the top Fortune 100 companies.

Besides taking a telephone call from a Lycoming student, several alumni have come to campus to discuss careers.

Lycoming Alumni & Lycoming Washington Connection

The year after graduation was horrendous for Gretchen Eagen '82. Determined to shake off the limitations of "smalltown" Pennsylvania, she moved to Washington, D.C., and spent the next several months trying to find a job in her field of psychology. If nothing else, the year taught her a lot about job hunting, and she returned to Lycoming the following year at the request of Dr. Berthold to share her insights with Lycoming students—beginning what has become a 10-year tenure as Lycoming's unofficial job hunting consultant.

Burke Veley '60 and intern Peng Yan '95.

Volunteering
 does not consume one of the most valuable things you can do.
 It can provide you with new skills and it is also a way to network.

Grethen, herself, is an example of the possibility of career change and upward job mobility. That crucial first job she finally landed was as an assistant counselor in a residence for mentally handicapped adults. She used the experience to become a teacher for the disabled; then an administrator of a residence where she found herself dealing with a lot of personnel issues.

Today, Eagen is vice president of Premier Personnel in Alexandria, Virginia, a permanent placement and executive search agency. It was Eagen who set up a counseling service as part of the business, charging clients $75 an hour for advice on everything from the art of networking to dressing for an interview—the same advice she gives to nervous Lycoming seniors for free. Eagen usually gets back to campus once a year, but she counsels countless others by phone.

"Sometimes what I tell Lycoming students is not what they want to hear," she said. When Maggie Hayden '91 was looking for a job on Capitol Hill, Eagen told her she would most likely have to start as a receptionist. Maggie kept hunting, but finally did take the receptionist job and within weeks was promoted to legislative assistant.

Grethen has been generous with her time to Lycoming as a way of "giving something back." But she is a firm proponent of volunteerism. She has served on the board of the National Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society for the past eight years and as its president for the past three years, and has been involved with projects for the YWCA.

"Don't underestimate the value of volunteer work in job-hunting," she admonished. "Volunteer activities can be one of the most valuable things you can do. It can provide you with new skills and it is also a way to network," she added. "One of the reasons why I was able to make the career changes that I did was because of my volunteer work."

Mike Schweder — Football Recruiter

Twenty-six years ago, Mike Schweder visited Lycoming College on a football recruiting trip. Today many football players have him to thank for allowing them to visit Lycoming.

Mike resides in Bethlehem and has offices in Washington, D. C., and Boston as the Director of Government Relations for AT&T. He has remained active in helping head football coach Frank Girardi's efforts in recruiting football players from the Lehigh Valley. Schweder, a standout football player for the Warriors who graduated in 1971, has also played an active role with the Warrior Club, the athletic fund-raising organization at the College.

"When I visited the school as a high school senior, I was impressed with the quality of athletes who were at Lycoming," reflected Schweder. "I was accepted at a lot of bigger schools, but the teams at Lycoming were competitive and Budd Whitehill did a tremendous job recruiting and selling the school to me."

Mike couldn't recall how his involvement in the current football recruiting job with coach Girardi began, it just evolved.

"I guess it was the mid '80s, probably 1986," noted Schweder. "I kept close with Frank and assistant coach Robb Curry. I helped them with contacting players from the Lehigh Valley and Montgomery County in Maryland in the early 80s and it grew from there. It seemed like something I'd enjoy doing and as it turns out, I really do. It cuts the coaches a break and allows them to concentrate on coaching until the recruiting 'season' begins."

Girardi pointed to the value of Schweder to the Warriors' football program.

"Mike is someone every college program would like to have," added Girardi. "He very much wants to help, and I couldn't think of anyone better than Mike helping me. He is our point man in the Lehigh Valley and our success in recruiting from that area is due to him."

Although Schweder performs a lot of leg work in recruiting in the Lehigh Valley, he has now been able to see the recruiting efforts from the other side of the fence.

"My son was recruited by many schools," Schweder pointed out. "I didn't try to push any one school on him. I wanted him to make his own decision, but I learned things through the recruiting process as a parent. One is that Lycoming recruits student/athletes and treats the players as well as any program in the country at any level of play."

According to Schweder, he talks to as many as a dozen prospective student/athletes at certain high-profile high school programs. He makes it a point to speak to any player to whom the high school coach wants him to talk.

"The difficult part of recruiting is gauging the talent level," added Schweder. "We want quality athletes who will be competitive on the field, but also will perform in the classroom as well. It is a difficult process for young kids to go through."

One thing Mike does not find difficult is boasting about Lycoming College on his recruiting trips.

"I'm here because I'm proud of my alma mater," added Schweder. "I don't have a vested interest other than wanting good student/athletes attending Lycoming."

Paul Henry '66 - President of the Lycoming AAEB

For many years Paul Henry '66 has been an active volunteer for Lycoming. Henry has hosted admissions receptions and organized the annual alumni gathering in the Philadelphia area last year. In 1993 he was the featured speaker at New Student Convocation. This fall he took on yet another project by becoming the president of the Lycoming Alumni Association Executive Board.

"I do it because I have a real fondness for Lycoming," Henry said. In his address to freshmen two years ago, he spoke eloquently about the personal interaction between professors and students at Lycoming.

Henry's mission as president of the AAEB is to make the Board an organizing force as well as an advisory one.

"We have a fair number of alumni involved now, but when you look at our numbers, our potential is largely untapped," said Henry.

"Part of what has enlightened me about Lycoming's potential has been my daughter's experience at Bucknell," said Henry. "For example, Bucknell has a very active alumni club in Philadelphia," Henry continued. "Certainly one of my priorities will be to put a major focus on the organization of regional alumni clubs where there are concentrations of alumni."

Henry is also part of a sub-committee on fund-raising. For the first time this fund drive is growing along with alumni programs.

Just Raise Your Hand

"Give us your time, your talent, or your treasure," is a remark that is often on the lips of Bob Shangraw '58, Chairman of the Board of Trustees who has given considerably of all three. For alumni interested in helping Lycoming in a variety of capacities, simply call the Office of Alumni Programs (321-4036); the Office of Admission (321-4026); or the Career Development Center (321-4034).

Together, we can make great things happen for Lycoming.

Lycoming at high school college nights. Thanks to the following alumni, who helped us out at programs this year:

 Craig Gordon '92
 Daniel Green '76

the mark for fewest losses in a campaign. Lycoming also set a school mark for goals in a game (13) against Pitt-Bradford and tied the school standard for consecutive wins with seven.

Women's Tennis

The women's tennis team made it to the semifinal round of the MAC championships for the first time. Junior Kelly Wehrung and sophomore Joy Graeff advanced to the MAC singles quarterfinals for the second-consecutive year with sophomores Jessica Bixler and Kara Denniston advancing to the quarterfinals in doubles. Wehrung finished the regular season with a 9-2 record at #1 singles with Graeff posting a perfect 11-0 regular-season record at #2 singles. Wehrung and Graeff were also undefeated as doubles partners, going 10-0. The squad ended with an 8-2 regular-season record, losing to Moravian in the playoffs.

Football

The football team captured its 20th-consecutive winning season with a 5-4 record. Five individuals were Freedom League first-team selections, including runningback Mike McCarty, receiver Steve Verton, offensive lineman Michael Downey, defensive end Lyle Wesneski and strong safety Scott Miller. Punter Tom Ralicke was a second-team pick. McCarty led the team in rushing and scoring with 42 points and Verton was four catches shy of tying the school record for receptions in a season (54). He also topped the team in receiving yards

(747) and all-purpose yards (85.0 per game). Miller was also an All-American selection at strong safety a year ago. He led the team in interceptions (six), tackles (53) and was second on the squad in pass breakups with nine. Miller also returned a punt 64 yards for a touchdown in the season finale against Delaware Valley. Wesneski was fifth on the team in tackles with 34 and also added 2 and-one-half sacks, a team-high eight tackles for losses and caused two fumbles.

Downey helped anchor an offensive line that averaged 269.7 yards of offense per game while Ralicke averaged 34.8 yards per punt.

Volleyball

The women's volleyball unit recorded its first winning season ever and set a school mark for wins in a season, ending with a 13-12 record. Sophomores Janine Slotter and Michelle Forney were named to several all tournament teams during the season. Forney completed the season ranked eighth nationally in Division III in hitting percentage (.380). The team also ranked 11th nationally in team blocks per game (3.5).

Women's Soccer

The women's soccer team ended 4-12-1 in their initial season. Sophomore Cindy Tritt led the team with four goals and one assist. The Warriors played an independent schedule and will compete in the MAC loop next fall. Sophomore Kelly Lingerfield also added a goal and an assist for the Warriors. Sophomore Cindy Rafferty led the team in assists with two.

McCarthy District Academic All-American

Senior Mike McCarthy, a running-back on the football team, was a District II G.T.E. College Division Academic All-American selection. The district consists of schools in Pennsylvania, Delaware, District of Columbia,

Maryland, New Jersey and West Virginia and are selected by College Sports Information Directors in the district.

McCarthy carries a 3.71 grade point average majoring in biology. He has been the leading rusher for the Warriors in each of the past two seasons, accumulating 1,070 yards in just 13 starts. McCarthy also scored 12 touchdowns over the two seasons and averaged 4.3 yards per carry.

McCarthy is now eligible for the national College Division Academic All-American team.

Lycoming College on Top Ten List for Third Time

For the third time in the last five years, Lycoming College has been rated among the top ten regional liberal arts colleges in the North by U.S. News & World Report.

The College achieved an overall ranking of 9th in its category among more than 103 other liberal arts colleges in Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

"Actually, Lycoming improved its ranking more than the numbers would suggest," said James D. Spencer, Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid. Spencer pointed out that 30 more colleges were in Lycoming's category.

"Last year, we were 12 out of 73 schools; this year we are 9 out of 103."

Lycoming ranked 4th in its category in academic reputation and 7th in faculty resources which include faculty credentials, faculty to student ratio, ratio of full time to part-time faculty, salary, and class size.

One category that pulled Lycoming down in its ranking was financial resources in which the college ranked 24. "Five of the schools ahead of us have higher tuition and fees. When you begin multiplying a $1,000 or $2,000 difference in tuition by 1500 students, you have significant greater resources," said Daniel G.

Fultz, Treasurer of the College. "There's no question that Lycoming also would benefit from a larger endowment and a significant increase in annual gifts. We've always managed to do a great deal with limited resources."

Pennsylvania did very well among small liberal arts colleges, capturing 7 of the top 10 places in this category. Susquehanna University, which was in the university category last year, placed first; Lebanon Valley College placed 5th; Messiah College placed 7th; King's College placed 8th and Grove City College placed 10th.

Class of '98 Hits New Records

Doubles became triples and an apartment house on Ross Street was pressed into service as Lycoming welcomed 391 freshmen and 53 transfer students this fall — opening its doors to 1515 students, the largest enrollment for the college in a generation.

The 444 new students were selected from a record 1590 applicants, the Class of 1998 is the largest in 22 years and the best qualified in 18 years, with SAT scores 17 points higher than last year.

Freshmen represent 247 different high schools from 10 different states (Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland, Connecticut, Delaware, Virginia, Georgia, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.)

Annual Fund Tops Half Million

For the first time in its history, alumni and friends of the College broke the half-million dollar mark in unrestricted gifts to the Annual Fund. The Annual Fund received $543,103 in gifts during the 1993-94 year.

Alumni participation dropped from 35% to 33%.

U.S. News & World Report Uses Alumni Participation as a yardstick

Alumni participation has never been more important to Lycoming. For the first time, U.S. News & World Report is using alumni participation in annual giving as one of the measurements to determine our rank. The percentage of alumni giving to the annual fund is used to determine satisfaction with the institution.

Lycoming Receives $213,460 in Grants

Lycoming has received four grants totaling $213,460.

The College is one of 16 Pennsylvania colleges participating in a $2,000,000 pilot program called PETEnet. The money, which is coming from HUD, will fund an interconnective video network. This means that a speaker at Lycoming College can be linked to a class at Lehigh University through a video monitor. Students at both Lehigh and Lycoming can interact with each other and with the speaker.

Lycoming's share of the total funding for the program is approximately $100,000.

Lycoming also shares a National Science Foundation grant for $37,720 with Pennsylvania College of Technology in Williamsport that has prepared both institutions to be linked to an international computer network in a program called PREPnet. Lycoming will become a "node" on the information superhighway called INTERNET. Students and faculty members will have cost-efficient access to computer network information sources throughout the United States and the world.

Two other grants described below include a Ben Franklin Partnership grant of $45,240 that was awarded to Dr. Mel Zimmerman, and another National Science Foundation matching grant to purchase $61,000 worth of instrumentation for the chemistry and biology departments.

Chemistry Alumni Turn $5,000 into $61,000 of Equipment

Call it the power of alumni giving. Lycoming College will add over $61,000 worth of state-of-art equipment to its chemistry and biology departments thanks to a grant from the National Science Foundation and the generosity of chemistry alumni.

This past fall, a matching grant of $30,618 was awarded to Dr. David Franz, professor of chemistry at the College for "Instrumentation and Laboratory Improvement."

Dr. Franz began his quest for the matching money by raising $5,000 from chemistry alumni. This gift, in turn, was matched by a gift from an anonymous alumnus. Franz then had $10,000.

By attending a workshop on the instrumentation last summer, Franz was able to get a discount from the manufacturer of $10,000 which the NSF counted towards the matching grant. Franz then had $20,000, or two-thirds of the matching money.

Finally, the NSF counted $10,000 of equipment that Lycoming already had—which will be used in conjunction with the instrumentation. With $30,000 to Lycoming's credit, the College was able to get the the $30,618 from the NSF to purchase the equipment.

The new equipment will put Lycoming College in the forefront of one of the hottest new fields in analytical chemistry, that of separations by capillary electrophoresis (CE), Franz explained. The new equipment for capillary electrophoresis, as well as new equipment for the complementary technique of high performance liquid chromatography (HPLC), will allow students to analyze and identify very complex mixtures. "We'll be riding the crest of this wave, not following this new science," said Franz.

Analysis of complex mixtures is very important in the environmental sciences and in bio-chemistry. One application is the analysis of DNA fragments, for example, a long-range possibility for Lycoming, Franz admits.

Dr. Franz's proposal was one of 1,771 the National Science Foundation received last year. He is currently on sabbatical doing research at the University of Virginia. The new equipment will be ready for student use in the fall of 1995.

Lycoming and Cromaglass, Inc., in Ben Franklin Partnership

A grant of $45,240 was awarded by Pennsylvania's Ben Franklin Technology Center to Dr. Mel Zimmerman, biology professor, for a year-long project that will create a partnership between Lycoming College and Cromaglass, Inc., of Williamsport to test a new wastewater treatment system. The total cost of the project is $82,440.

In addition to covering equipment, supplies and testing; the grant money will also cover partial work-study stipends for four Lycoming College students. Under the direction of Dr. Zimmerman, the students will monitor the testing of the new units at two different sites.

The Emerald City Players Makes Debut

The Emerald City Players, a new children's theatre performing group made its debut this summer. The group is under the direction of Jerry D. Allen, an associate professor of theatre at Lycoming College. Allen founded the Players as an outreach program and as a way to give Lycoming students another kind of theatre experience.

During the school year, Lycoming College theatre students will help produce plays which will include both college students and elementary students in the cast. During the summer, the children's theatre will be part of the Arena Summer theatre program.

The group takes its name from the fabled city in the Wizard of Oz.

New Snack Bar for Jack's Corner

Students can order pizza and grill items from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. in Wertz Student Center at a brand new snack bar facility called J.P.'s. That stands for Jack's Place. The snack bar is located in Jack's Corner, a student recreation room, which was named after Jack Buckle, a former dean of students.

Lois Gibbs

Lois Gibbs, the housewife who brought the Love

Canal toxic dump site to national attention, was keynote speaker on September 20 at the College's fall symposium on the environment. Gibbs is now the executive director of the Citizen's Clearinghouse for Hazardous Wastes in Washington D.C.

A panel that included Gibbs; Karen Kalla of the national Sierra Club; Thomas Jackson, an environmental lawyer; and Robert Pierce of the Wetland Training Institute debated the "Costs and Opportunities of Being Green." The discussion was moderated by Bill Kelly of WVIA.

Irene Worth

Actress Irene Worth presented a one-woman show on Edith Wharton as part of the Lycoming College Artist Series.

Lycoming and Dickinson Alumni Form Heritage Club

The Heritage Club is a new social organization for alumni who have been out of school 45 years or longer (from the classes of 1947 and earlier), as well as retired faculty members of Dickinson and Lycoming College. Mary Russell '33 serves as the club's volunteer chairwoman.

For its inaugural meeting, Lycoming College president, James E. Douthat, outlined the College's plans for connecting the College's entrance with downtown Williamsport, much like Old Main served to connect the College and community years ago. He spoke about other enhancements planned for the campus.

The group plans to hold at least four programs each year. Alumni who would like to be included on the mailing list for future events should contact the alumni office, (717) 321-4036.

Rochester Gathering A Big Splash

The Choir

On four in East Europe

The small recreation hall in Wagenfeld, Germany, exploded with applause as the 40 members of the Lycoming College tour choir, conducted by Dr. Fred Thayer, put the final flourish on the spiritual Deep River. Then the Wagenfeld choir sang a song; the Lycoming choir answered back with another, fueled by adrenaline that masked the fatigue of 18 hours of travel: the 4-hour bus ride from Williamsport to Newark, the 7-hour international night flight to Frankfurt, the one-hour commuter flight to Hanover, and the 90-minute bus trip to Wagenfeld.

Ekke Schneemann

After the bake sales and the raffles, after the singing valentines, the sale of subs and candy bars and writing letters to alumni; after raising the $54,000 needed, the choir was really in Germany enjoying an informal reception in this small German town, ready for the great adventure.

For the next 16 days, the choir traveled 3800 miles by bus through Germany, Poland, and the Czech Republic, the equivalent of going from New York to Los Angeles and back to Las Vegas. They gave 10 formal concerts in concert halls and churches that were packed to hear the young Americans.

There were friends to meet them. In Wagenfeld, Ekke Schneemann met them. Now a teacher, he had been an exchange student at Lycoming and had sung under Walter Melver. In Osnabruck, Guy Rothfuss '64, who had lived there for 23 years, returned to help organize the concert. In Szczecin, Poland, Jan Syrocki, who had spent the previous semester as a conductor-in-residence at Lycoming College, was there to return the hospitality.

And oh, the memories: receiving flowers in Szczecin, sampling the borscht in Poznan, bowing to a standing ovation in a church in Seligenstadt, reveling at a pig roast outside of Prague, giving a formal concert in tuxes and gowns in Pardubice barely 30 minutes after stepping off the bus, seeing the famous Black Madonna in Czestochowa, touring Prague in the moonlight, and walking through the gates at Auschwitz. These are some of the memories that will stay with the choirsters for years to come.

"You can be proud of your choir," Ekke Schneemann wrote to President James E.

Douthat afterwards. "[They] did a lot for the better understanding between our two nations. The town of Wagenfeld is famous for its International Choir Days, a festival that regularly draws choirs from France, Russia, Sweden, the Czech Republic and the Netherlands," Schneemann told the president. "But the Lycoming College Choir... was the best we have ever had."

We think so, too.

"I'll remember singing to American tourists at 1 a.m in the morning in Krakow while we were out seeing the sights."

Sara Weaver '96

"The Europeans are more into music: Lots of college-aged students were at our concerts. I can't even get my own fraternity brothers to see a concert."

David Wunder '96

"The trip was a wonderful experience and one that I will remember for a long time. The people were very friendly. They went out of their way to make us feel at home and feel comfortable."

Doug Hartzell '95

The communication in Segligenstadt broke down for Carol Lady. "I was paging through a German women's magazine making conversations. I'd pointed to a recipe and ask her what it was. She made a noise like a pig. Then I pointed to another recipe... which she translated as strawberries. I was having a good time. I felt so embarrassed at dinner when she served medallions of pork and strawberry torte for dessert — the recipes from the book. Apparently she thought that I was requesting them."

Carol Lady '94

Things we remember from the tour.

"Auschwitz was very moving. It was a rainy and dreary day and we sang the Benediction at the Wall of Death."

Stephanie Smith '95

"In Poland, we toured a salt mine 400 feet underground. We were completely intrigued by the different sculptures. There was one room that was like a sanctuary, bigger than the gymnasium.

We sang in that room, and the acoustics were very good."

Michael Saulnier '95

"The favorite song was Ave Maria. In Poland, however, people cried when we sang the Polish national anthem in Polish."

Carina Mausteller '96

"The saddest memory is of us singing the benediction at Auschwitz—even the guys were silent."

Sara Weaver '96

"On behalf of the Lycoming College Choir members, thanks to so many people for the generous support which helped to make this endeavor possible."

Fred Thayer, conductor

On a rare free day, the choir tours downtown Prague.

For Jersey Shore Pharmacist, Community is the Word

Working in his pharmacy on Independence Day over twenty years ago, Jack Daneker found the Jersey Shore Area lacking a sense of pride and patriotism. They needed a purpose to celebrate. He called a Town Meeting Celebration, which is now held each year on Independence Day. The Celebration features tours of historical homes, refreshments, and a fireworks display.

Since the Fourth of July Celebration began, Daneker involved himself in other community services. He was a member of the Jersey Shore Rotary Club and participated in the Rotary Exchange Program. He and his family hosted the area's first foreign exchange student in 1970.

Daneker was a pharmacist in the area for forty years, serving customers in the Williamsport, Jersey Shore, and Lock Haven areas.

"I enjoyed the work very much," he said. He also added that there very much a sense of pride of community in his work place.

Daneker attended Lycoming College for three years before enrolling at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. He received his B.S. in Pharmacy in 1954.

While at Lycoming, Daneker was a member of the football team for one year, a Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity brother, and a member of the Lycoming College Choir. It was through his choir participation that he met his wife, the former Marlene Caris. They were one of the many "choir couples" that the group sees each year.

Daneker recalls his choir membership to be a wonderful experience. The choir was under the leadership of Lycoming College Choir Founder Walter G. McIver. Daneker said his former instructor was "a wonderful man, very inspirational."

Daneker and his wife still continue to sing with the Woolrich Community Church Choir.

They reside in Lock Haven. They have four children, Deborah, Diane, David, and Daniel, and four grandchildren.

Richard '68 and Mary-Jane Swanson Hedden '68

Puppy Raisers

Like any puppy, Wiley loves to chase tennis balls and dig in the garden of Richard '68 and Mary Jane Swanson Hedden '68.

But Wiley is destined for great things. At 12 months, he'll begin a serious 4 to 6 month training program to become a guide dog for a blind person.

Dick and Mary are puppy raisers for South-eastern Guide Dog, Incorporated, and act as a foster family for a pup.

The non-profit organization, based in Palmetto, Florida, actually owns the dog and pays vet fees (but not food) while the puppy is in the care of the Heddens.

Since 1989, the Heddens have helped Drew, Queue, Gus, Doc and now Wiley learn good manners and become acclimated to the hustle and bustle of a guide dog's life as preparation to become a lifetime partner for a blind person.

The Heddens receive a Labrador retriever puppy at 10 weeks, whom they get to name, although all dogs in the same litter must have names beginning with the same letter. They start with basic training, from housebreaking to simple commands. "But mostly what we do is exposure," said Mary Jane. "We have taken our dogs on buses, through crowds and busy airports, to restaurants and to parades." Wiley has even been to home games of the Magic basketball team in Orlando.

The couple became puppy raisers after Mary read an article in the local paper about a blind person and his guide dog. They were already "dog people" with a pet Giant Schnauzer "Annie." And Dick's family had raised two seeing eye dogs when Dick was growing up in Warren, N.J.

But giving up the puppy at the end of the year had been a traumatic experience for 10-year-old Richard, so he went along with Mary Jane's idea somewhat reluctantly. They have found the solution to giving up the puppy a simple one: they take another.

Over the years, they have become puppyhood experts. They can housebreak a puppy in four to five days, Mary estimated. "You just need to watch them all the time and give plenty of praise," she said.

"You have to spend time with the dogs," Dick added. Originally, they thought they might not be able to take a puppy because both have demanding jobs: he as a program planner with Martin Marietta; she as a systems analyst with Harcourt Brace. But it has worked out nicely. They do prefer to take a puppy home initially on a weekend when they can devote all their time to making the little one feel comfortable.

"I find this kind of volunteer service uplifting," said Mary. "Many volunteer programs can be depressing. But we get to know people who are blind and see how they meet that disability. It's really a very positive kind of volunteer program."

Environmental lawyer Gerson Smoger '72

Toxic torts is what Gerson Smoger calls his legal specialty. His clients include babies with lead poisoning, Vietnam veterans, and third world citizens suffering chemical burns.

As an environmental lawyer, Smoger has been involved in some of the major environmental cases of the decade. He was in Bophal, India, representing the Muslim Church against Dow Chemical Company, was involved in the Agent Orange case, and he was the head counsel in the Times Beach, Missouri case. Yet despite these high profile suits, he estimates that 50% of his cases are pro bono; and payment for the other 50% contingent on the outcome of the case. Large awards—even from the government—are not as large as they seem, he cautions. The government settled the Agent Orange case for $180 million... or $90 per soldier. The family of a veteran dying of Agent Orange received less than $3200.00.

Last November, Smoger was invited to speak at a conference on herbicides and war in Hanoi, Vietnam.

Smoger graduated from Lycoming while spending just two semesters on campus. His advance placement credits allowed him to enter as a sophomore. He lived on campus for two semesters, spent the summer in Israel on a dig with Dr. Guerra, spent a semester in Washington, followed by one at the United Nations, earning him enough extra credits to graduate that same year. Entering the Ph.D. program at University of Pennsylvania, Smoger completed his doctorate work by the time he was 21. He subsequently earned his law degree from Berkeley.

Smoger says he was always an activist. He began compiling credentials as an expert in groundwater contamination as an outgrowth of his work on a Senate campaign. He was hired on his first law case based on his groundwater knowledge. "I picked up the law as I went along," he says.

Today, he has his own law firm with offices in Oakland, California, and Dallas, Texas.

Animal Activist: Pat Courtright '74

On a typical day last summer, Pat Stalgaitis Courtright spent her afternoon on top of the Genetti-Lycoming hotel in Williamsport on a falcon watch as part of her involvement in the reintroduction of endangered species to the area. (The falcons will help nature balance the large pigeon population.)

That evening she was at a Board meeting of the Audubon Society of which she is vice president. The next morning, she was up early calling the University of Pennsylvania, making arrangements for an operation on a cat born with a cleft palate.

There's more. Pat is involved in fund raising for the Lycoming Animal Protection Society, of which she is treasurer. She spends one or two days a week at their no-kill animal shelters where she is also the Animal Health Manager.

This isn't her job; it's her life, she says, although she also helps husband Philip Courtright '77, owner of Lyco Computer Inc.

Animals have been a passion with Pat since high school days when she spent her vacations working in veterinarian offices, thinking she would become a vet herself. At Lycoming, however, she switched from pre-vet medicine to art, a secondary love.

Pat spent the first nine years after Lycoming College working with people; first as an admissions counselor for Lycoming and later as a counselor for the Williamsport Area Community College. She switched to animals because, she assures us, they don't talk back and are sometimes more appreciative.

Her involvement as an animal activist simply evolved over the years. Helping a neighbor going into a nursing home find a home for her cats led to her involvement with the animal shelter—and the rest, as they say, is history.

"We both love animals," she says of her husband, Philip, "perhaps, because we were both involved with biology." She and Philip now have 28 cats, a herd of dairy goats, a horse, chickens and two dogs—all on a farm in Antes Fort.

This fall she also found time to be co-chairman of the 20th reunion of the Class of 1974.

largest marketing communications agency in New York state outside of Manhattan. David C. Hannaford '81

After serving as treasurer for four years, David Hannaford, CPA, has been made a director of Our House, Inc., a private non-profit corporation which operates five group homes, five supportive living apartments and four supervised apartments for mentally handicapped adults in Morris and Union Counties in New Jersey.

Hannaford, who is chief financial officer at Burgdorff Realtors in Murray Hill, was talked into becoming the treasurer of the corporation after a colleague resigned the volunteer position. "I felt a need to do something outside of work in order to have a better blend in my life," he says.

Before joining "Our House," Hannaford had had no contact with the mentally handicapped. "They struck me as being ordinary people," he observes. "They can hold down a job and, in fact, they can perform many jobs better than non-handicapped people. Actually, they are so proud of their jobs that they virtually live for them."

Through his volunteer work, Hannaford has come to know many of the residents and talks easily about an autistic savant who can rattle off the day of the week for any date in time — past or present.

Our House has a $2,500,000 annual budget to administer; 85% coming from the State of New Jersey. But as a director, Hannaford finds himself also involved in a number of policy decisions that can run from how to handle matters of sexuality in the house to what constitutes disruptive behavior.

"There's no personal benefit," Hannaford says. "Working at Our House won't enhance your career, and it doesn't help you enter a difference social strata. The satisfaction you get is knowing that you are making an organization a better place."

On a professional note, Hannaford joined Burgdorff Realtors in 1987 after being an accountant at Price-Waterhouse. He was instrumental in the 1991 family buyback of the firm from outside ownership and in the conversion of its computer system for accounting and financial reporting. Dear Madame,

I read the article entitled "Choices". I must say I was appalled and disheartened as you failed to present any women of color in your article. As an African American. . . I had many wonderful experiences as a student and had the good fortune to use my college experience to achieve tremendous goals.

I am aware that women of color graduated pre and post my days at Lycoming and these women went on to achieve great success in their given profession.

In the 1960 May Court picture, my name is wrong. It is Margy Williammee not Marjorie Williams. I want to have my friends recognize me after 34 years.

Dear Editor,

As a 1965 graduate I was concerned that there was no mention of some former Queens. . . specifically the late Charlotte "Hayley" Crayton as Ms. Clayton was a beloved member of the class.

Helping Lycoming College While Reducing Tax Obligations

Do you find yourself with a cash bonus this year (and perhaps others), and looking for ways to put it to good use and to shelter it from some of the taxes? Here are a few ideas:

Charitable Lead Trust—Donor transfers funds into a trust for a fixed term of years with interest income paid to Lycoming College. At the end of the term, assets are returned to the donor or another non-charitable beneficiary. A tax deduction is provided in the year in which the trust is established. Tax-free bonds work best with the Lead Trust.

Educational Trust—Donor transfers funds into a charitable remainder trust that makes payments for a limited number of years; the payments are used to provide partial or full tuition for a child or grandchild or another. As the trust provides its final payment, the remainder value of the trust reverts to Lycoming College for its use (perhaps as an endowed scholarship for other deserving students). A tax deduction is provided in the year in which the trust is established.

Deferred Gift Annuity—Donor transfers funds into a gift annuity that will eventually make payments to him/her for one lifetime or two (perhaps a spouse or loved one). There is an immediate income tax charitable deduction, a significant reduction on any capital gains tax involving appreciated property, a guaranteed income (part of which may be tax-free), with payments starting on a future date as determined by the donor.

In all cases, you have the opportunity to make a gift during your lifetime and to support the work of Lycoming College. All of this and saving taxes, too.
